51. Chapter Seven Learning Activity

This is a review worksheet, not new teaching. It poses questions to check what you retained from Chapter Seven (Celestine V, the Avignon popes, the Black Death, the Great Papal Schism, Wycliffe, the Common Life Movement, Joan of Arc, the humanists, and Erasmus). It closes with a reflection on whether God takes political sides in war.

Key takeaways

- Use it to self-test: for each figure or event, try to answer from memory before checking the chapter.
- The main point to carry away: God is not on the side of any regime, only on the side of his own character, shown at the cross, not in conquest.

Passages worth keeping

“God isn't on the side of any human regime. God is on the side of his own character.”

The activity's central takeaway, applied to both the Hundred Years' War and today.
