Pearsons, George
God is My Source

8. The Blessing of Abraham

A short devotional chapter that strings together the blessings promised in Deuteronomy 28, framing prosperity and provision as the reward of obeying God. It closes with a first-person declaration that God alone is the source of every need being met.

Key takeaways

- Obedience to God's voice is the condition tied to the blessings listed (city, country, family, work, storehouse).
- God promises defeat of enemies, surplus, open 'storehouses of heaven,' and to make you the head, not the tail.
- No other god is needed: God Himself is the Source of prosperity and supplies every need.
- The chapter ends with a spoken confession claiming that promise personally.

Scripture referenced

- Deuteronomy 28:2 -- blessings come through obeying God's voice

- Deuteronomy 28:12 -- God opens heaven's storehouse; you lend, not borrow
- Deuteronomy 28:13 -- made the head and not the tail